

What is Cohousing?

Cohousing communities are intentional communities, created and run by their residents.

Each household has a self-contained, private home as well as shared community space.

Residents come together to manage their community, share activities, and regularly eat together.

Cohousing is a way of resolving the isolation many people experience today, recreating the neighbourly support of the past.

Cohousing communities can be inter-generational, welcoming anyone of any age and family structure.

Cohousing communities are made up of people from broad economic backgrounds.

Cohousing embeds collective resident control and stewardship in its legal form and decision making.

Cohousing communities are inclusive and part of the wider community.

A priority for cohousing is to provide a practical home and supportive social environment for people with disabilities.

Cirencester Cohousing

"Cirencester Cohousing will make an exciting and innovative contribution to the new communities in the Cotswolds"
Lawrence Miller, Barnwood Trust

With the support of:

 cirencoho@gmail.com

 Cirencester Cohousing

Share and contribute to a community in development

Proposed completion 2021

Cirencester Cohousing

*A new housing development on a 1.2 hectare site.
32 self contained homes combining houses and apartments.
Mixed income residents and intergenerational households.*

*Central pedestrian street for safe play and community activities.
Access road and parking on the periphery.
Common house at the heart of the community.*

Shared facilities for cooking, eating together, entertainment, creative activities and socialising. Shared gardens for play and for growing produce.

*A community in development, with members old and new contributing to the vision and design of the site,
the housing and the facilities.*